The Rockwool Group expands further in Russia

The Board of Directors of Rockwool International A/S has today approved the establishment of a new factory which will significantly expand the Rockwool Group's production capacity in Russia. The new factory will be placed close to the city of Kazan in the Volga region, approx. 900 km east of Moscow in the special economic zone of Alabuga. The Rockwool Group already operates two factories in Russia, one in the Moscow area and one northeast of St. Petersburg.

The new factory is expected to be operational in 2010 and will offer a full building insulation product assortment.

The total costs of the investment are €125 million and the new factory will give jobs to 140 employees. The Danish Investment Fund for Central and Eastern Europe will maintain their actual level of share holding in the Russian activity.

The Russian construction market is in a positive development and has been the fastest growing market of the Rockwool Group. In just 7 years, Russia went from under 1% to 9% of the Group's turnover.

The new Russian factory is part of the Rockwool Group's expansion plan. In November 2006, the Group announced that five major capacity expansion investments were considered. In December 2006, a new production line in Poland was announced, in March 2007 a production line in Canada and in May a new factory in Ukraine and a new production line in the UK. With the Russian factory, all five have now been specified.
